Club, at a meeting held last night in the next broadside at the hearing before the House District committee to

Plans for the club's representation at the hearing were made previous to last night's meeting, but the rally was held to get an expression of opinion in the belief that this measure is best for Washington. William II. Baldwin, who is at the head of the committee which has been pushing the legislation, presided. In a brief explanation of the status of the bill in Congress, he said the supporters have not found any hard spots in the House committee to get over or any House committee to get over or any

"Loan Sharks" Denounced.

Those lenders of money classed as "loan sharks," who charge an exorbitant rate

"They extract blood money from the oor," declared Judge William H. De Lacy of the Juvenile Court. "They prey on the poverty of the pool people; let us stop them," declared F. L. Siddons.

Two criticisms have been aimed at the explained last night, and the answers to hose arguments were specially discussed. Both were considered by Mr. Siddons, who was the first speaker.
"Practically all are agreed as to the necessity for a law to regulate the loan pusiness under consideration," said Mr.

Cause of Differences. "Differences of opinion, such as there quiring those engaging in the business to keep a register of loans made, which the rate down to a minimum. To this we accocates of the bill in its present form reply that competition is now and for many years has been free in this business in the District, and it seems to have pro-"But were this not so, and competition did seem to promise relief and a just rate, a modern gentleman's agreement between the lenders of money would go a long way toward defeating what credulous people still believe competition, in some mysterious way, can accomplish.

Objections Discussed.

7 per cent.

"On the question of keeping a register of loans those engaged in the business insist that this is neither necessary nor air, urging that the private business of by the municipal authorities, and that the n the case of pawnbrokers does not exist n the case of the business under consideration. There are two answers to special privilege in the rate of interest that is allowed to be charged, and in such pose such conditions upon the enjoyment of the privilege as in its wisdom seems "That the provisions in question, to which objection is made, are reasonable, cannot be gainsaid. There are abundant precedents for it. We need only remember such examples as the power given to the bureau of corporations to inquire into the affairs of industrial institutions of different kinds, and the power of the interstate commerce commission to inquire into the affairs of the interstate carriers, for the purpose of insuring a farms located on a thirty or forty obedience to law.

Register Not Public.

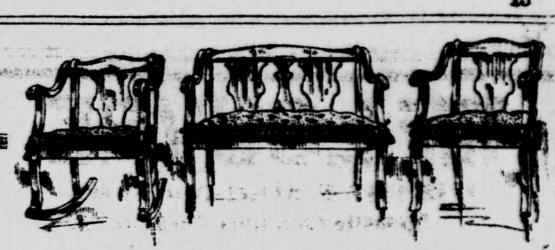

The second answer is that the protection from exposure of the private business of the citizen must always yield to the requirements of government. It is to be remembered that the register to be kept is not to be open to the public, but only to the Commissioners and their tagents, and that only for the purpose of enforcing the law. Those citizens who do business with the pawnbrokers might with the same reason complain that their financial needs and embarrassments should not be revealed to the Commissioners and those who do sioners and the police, and those who do churches, electric light plant, tourist sioners and the police, and those who do the churches, electric light plant, tourist business with the national banks, that # hotel, banks, etc. The men back of their private banking business ought not to be exposed to the controller of the currency and the national bank examiners, but who ever hears of such complaints being made. They are not, and no rea- Windermere with you: their families son exists for making them.

Admission by Money Lenders.

Some of the most intelligent of the money lenders agree that the business is one that should be supervised and regulated by government officials, and the scope and extent of such supervision and regulation must be that which experience teaches will be effective, bearing in mind the character of business to be controlled. And we of the citizens' commis- ple-namely, those honest poor people sion have no doubt that the requirement of the register will go a long way toward of charity and yet are compelled at times insuring the conduct of the loan business within the limits that our measure prescribes."
